Event: La Masseria Dellee Allodole (The Lark Farm)

Directed by Paolo Taviani

(2008, 90 min. Italy)

During the First World War, the Young Turks Party orders the massacre of the Armenians. All the males in the Avakian Family are slaughtered, while the females, including proud, headstrong Nunik, are led into the desert, where they are doomed to perish. But Nazim, a member of the Turkish 'Confraternity of Beggars', is plotting to save them. One night, an horse-drawn carriage with a false bottom arrives to take them away, only the Turkish guards grow suspicious. To distract them, Nunik runs out into the centre of the camp and begins singing an Armenian song. As the commander orders that she be killed, her eyes catch those of Youssouf, a Turkish soldier who has fallen in love with her. He has promised that he will never let her be tortured, and so, as the rest of her family escapes, he makes sure that Nunik dies a quick, merciful death.

Collaboration with the Armenian Historical Association of Rhode Island.

ABUELO

Directed by Mary Ann Kellogg

(2009, 15 min. U S A)

In this heartfelt short film, we find 12 year old Emily who after the death of her mother would rather be left alone. When her father enlists Alberto, Emily's old Argentinian grandfather to watch over her. Emily is not shy about her displeasure with the arrangement or her contempt for the man who 'doesn't even speak English. Alone in her parent's bedroom, Emily takes comfort among the smell and feel of her mother's belongings when Alberto interrupts her reverie. Grappling with the language barrier between them, Emily agrees to accompany her grandfather on a journey into their Los Angeles neighborhood that proves both disappointing and delightful. In an unexpected diversion on the way home Emily witnesses the foreign world of cigars, civility, conversation, Tango music and dance. Later on that night in the warm glow of the kitchen, Alberto understands what Emily cannot express in words and Alberto offers his granddaughter her first tango lesson on the kitchen linoleum. Emily and Alberto dance a simple tango and discover a language they can share.

In 1978, Toronto-poet Souvankham Thammavongsa's parents lived in a Lao refugee camp in Thailand, where she was born. Her father kept a scrapbook filled with doodles, addresses, postage stamps, maps and measurements. He threw this scrapbook out one day and when he did, she took it and found this...

ISSIZ ADAM (ALONE)

Directed by Cagan Irmak

(2008, 113 min, Turkey)

Cast: Cemal Hunal

Thirty-something ALPER is a talented chef who runs his own restaurant. He may have achieved success in business, but the same cannot be said of his personal life. While caught in the triangle of his gastronomic creations, one-night stands and escort girls, he suddenly finds his life take a new turn when he walks into a second-hand bookshop in the backstreets of Beyoglu to buy an old record he has been looking for.

ADA is an attractive, unassuming and relatively stable woman in her late 20s who designs and makes fancy dress costumes for kids. One day, while wandering around Beyoglu in search of a second-hand book, she walks into the same shop as Alper. A womaniser by nature, Alper is impressed by Ada's good looks and sets off in pursuit. As a pretext for introducing himself, he tracks down the book Ada was looking for, buys it and then presents it to her.

As it turns out, this book is the beginning of a passionate affair between the two. But the harder Alper tries to create space for Ada in his existing life, the more restricted, the more claustrophobic he starts to feel. Ada, however, is blissfully unaware of the poison in Alper's blood and delights on being in love.

Ada and Alper live out their romance as far as they are able and in the measure to which life allows them.

Marriage Equality Discussion Panel

RHODE ISLAND INTERNATIONAL FILM FESTIVAL

AUGUST 3-9, 2009

After screening a film that addresses issues related to equal marriage rights for same-sex couples, please join us for a panel discussion. Participants will include filmmakers, Kathy Kushnir, Executive Director of Marriage Equality Rhode Island, Rev. Jose Ballester, consulting minister of Bell Street Chapel, and members of the Rhode Island General Assembly who support marriage equality legislation.

Special Screening:

Out in the Silence

Directed by Dean Hamer and Joe Wilson
(2009, 56 min. U S A)

The announcement of filmmaker Joe Wilson's wedding to another man ignites a firestorm of controversy and a quest for change in the small Pennsylvania hometown he left long ago. Drawn back by a plea for help from the mother of a gay teen being tormented at school, Wilson takes viewers on an exhilarating journey through love, hate, and understanding in rural America.

9:30 p.m.

Storm

Directed by Joan Beveridge
(2008, 13 min. United Kingdom)

A daughter's unexpected visit to her estranged mother triggers an emotional storm leading to sudden and explosive violence.

¿IGUALES?

Directed by JAVIER DE LA TORRE
(2008, 15 min. Spain)

Adela isn't the girl from a romantic comedy. Hassan isn't the gallant hero of an adventure film. Sylvia isn't at all like a femme fatale. And Sofia isn't either what we can call an ideal mother. What they are and what they look for... well, does it matter?

Swimming with Lesbians

Directed by David Marshall
(2009, 69 min. U S A)

It has been said, "Gays have a past but no history." Gays and Lesbians don't grow up immersed in gay history, it is something they must search for. For those coming of age in the 1950's, much of significant American gay history is their personal history -- the Mattachine Society, Stonewall, the gay rights movement, psychiatric redefinition of homosexuality, Don't Ask Don't Tell, Romer v. Evens, AIDS, civil unions, marriage -- it's all in the last 50 years. Swimming with Lesbians is a film that explores an upstate New York community's efforts to create an LGBT historic archive -- led by the extraordinary Madeline Davis.

No.4 Street of Our Lady

Directed by Barbara Bird, Judy Maltz, Richie Sherman

(2009, 90 min. U S A / Israel, U S A, Ukraine)

No. 4 Street of our Lady tells the remarkable, yet little-known, story of a Polish-Catholic woman who rescued 16 Jews during the Holocaust by cleverly passing herself off as a Nazi sympathizer. This film reflects on the painful moral dilemmas that acts of rescue and survival often entail and reveals how traumatic events of the past continue to play out years later. On the eve of World War II, more than 6,000 Jews lived in Sokal, a small town in Eastern Poland, now part of Ukraine. By the end of the war, only about 30 had survived, most of them rescued by Francisca Halamajowa. For close to two years, Halamajowa hid her Jewish acquaintances in her tiny home and cooked and cared for them, right under the noses of German troops camping on her property and hostile neighbors. Two families were hidden in the hayloft of her pigsty, and one family in a hole dug under her kitchen floor. In the final months of the war, she also provided shelter to a German soldier who had defected – an act that almost cost her her life. The film draws on excerpts from a diary kept by one of the survivors, Moshe Maltz, whose granddaughter is one of the filmmakers. It also incorporates testimonies from other Jews saved by Halamajowa, her descendants and former neighbors, whose paths converge on a trip back to Sokal. Powerful location shots add another rich dimension to the story, providing the backdrop as the drama unfolds.

Going Home

Directed by Jason Hoffmann

(2008, 73 min. South Korea, U S A)

Jason Hoffmann has always identified himself as being a true New Yorker. Having grown up in liberal Greenwich Village with Jewish parents, he was content with the American life that had been chosen for him nearly two decades earlier when he was adopted from South Korea. Jason never expected to explore his complicated and concealed family history, but as he grew into adulthood, he became increasingly more curious about his mysterious roots.

In the documentary GOING HOME, Jason finally summons up the courage to initiate contact with his birth mother. Without confirmation that a face-to-face meeting would even be possible, Jason takes a risk and sets out on a life-changing journey halfway around the world with his Korean girlfriend, Mikyung by his side. Once in Korea, Jason excitedly learns that his mother wishes to meet him, but when she suddenly falls ill on the day of their planned meeting, Jason's short-lived optimism takes a discouraging turn.

Filled with deeply human moments of joy and pain, GOING HOME shares Jason's intimate search in realizing what his life could have been had he not been adopted. In the face of adversity and complete upheaval of buried insecurities about his identity, Jason will find a profound new meaning of family.

Tapped

Directed by Stephanie Soechtig
(2009, 79 min. U S A)

Is access to clean drinking water a basic human right, or a commodity that should be bought and sold like any other article of commerce? Stephanie Soechtig's debut feature is an unflinching examination of the big business of bottled water.

From the producers of Who Killed the Electric Car and I.O.U.S.A., this timely documentary is a behind-the-scenes look into the unregulated and unseen world of an industry that aims to privatize and sell back the one resource that ought never become a commodity: our water.

From the plastic production to the ocean so many of these bottles end up in, this inspiring doc trails the path of the bottled water industry and the communities which were the unwitting chips on the table. A powerful portrait of the lives affected by the bottled water industry, this revelatory doc shows those caught at the intersection of big business and the public's right to water.

"Eye-opening, informative and incredibly important for you to see...Tapped is another example of realizing film's potential to inspire. This is a passionate documentary, well-executed from engaging and intelligent voices who will inform and entertain you with their movie. See it!"

Directed by John Lavall
(2008, 59 min. Ethiopia, U S A)

HOME ACROSS LANDS is a documentary that explores how a small group of resettled Kunama refugees find support and reestablish their sense of community in a small New England State.

RHODE ISLAND INTERNATIONAL FILM FESTIVAL

AUGUST 3-9, 2009

Considered among the original inhabitants of Eritrea the Kunama are a marginalized minority populating the remote but fertile regions near the border of Ethiopia.

In 1998, war between Eritrea and Ethiopia broke out in a conflict over these fertile border lands forcing over 4,000 Kunama to flee across the border into Northern Ethiopia. In 2000, the war ended with the Eritrean government regaining control of the disputed area, separating thousands of Kunama from their homeland and way of life.

Today the Kunama wait in desolation, 45 km from the contentious Eritrean border, warehoused in the Shimelba Refugee Camp in Northern Ethiopia. Life in the camp is difficult and opportunities for a better life are nonexistent but the Kunama remain committed to their strong sense of community and family in spite of their displacement. Unwanted in Ethiopia and unable to return to their homes safely, a small number of Kunama are given the opportunity for resettlement in the United States.

HOME ACROSS LANDS chronicles the journey of these newly arrived Kunama as they strive to become self-reliant, invested participants in their new home. Guiding their transition is the resettlement agency, International Institute of Rhode Island that connects them to the resources they need as they work to establish a new community and a better life for their families.

Suddenly, she is interrupted by three mysterious women: 80-year old Brit - Emma Chaise (Mimi Cozzens) - feisty former WWII fighter pilot; Liah Montez (Myriam Tubert) - 70-something Hispanic beauty - former owner of a whorehouse in Guadalajara, and "Mad" Sonja (Damara Reilly) - a hip reefer-smoking ex-dancer. As the women become intimate sharing their personal stories of failed romance... along with laced brownies and shots of vodka.... Trudy begins to fall under their spell.

Following tales of love and loss, where "beginnings come from endings, endings from beginnings," Trudy's perception of life changes, as she uncovers new meaning to the words "letting go".

BITTER/SWEET

Directed by: Jeff Hare
(2008, 105 min. Thailand)

RHODE ISLAND INTERNATIONAL FILM FESTIVAL

AUGUST 3-9, 2009

Cast: James Brolin, Kalorin Supalak Nemayothin, Kip Pardue, Laura Sorenson, Napakprapa Mamee Nakprasit

"Bitter/Sweet" is a character-driven romantic comedy, while at the same time, also a classic, "fish-out-of-water" story. The movie is the story of American executive and coffee expert Brian Chandler (Kip Pardue), who seemingly has a "perfect" life. However, things begin to change for Brian after his boss, renegade coffee mogul Calvert Jenkins (James Brolin) sends him to Thailand to inspect a crop for purchase.

Upon arrival, Brian meets Ticha (Napakprapa "Mamee" Nakprasit), a Bangkok PR executive who takes care of Thailand's glamorous multi-talent diva Tata Young (Tata Young). Busy herself with work, Ticha has long-since given up on the prospects of finding true love. At the urging of her coffee farmer parents with the hopes that Brian will purchase his coffee there and save the village from cutthroat middlemen, Ticha takes on the task of bringing Brian to the coffee fields of Southern Krabi, and reconciling with her past.

Ticha's fierce sister Mint (Pakaramai Potranan) and her handsome boxing boyfriend Komane (Akara Amatayakul), her outgoing best friend Mook (Kalorin Nemayothin) and Mook's outrageously funny expatriate boyfriend Werner (Spencer Garrett), not to speak of Brian's fiancée Amanda (Laura Sorenson) give interesting sub plots to the story.

Brian and Ticha are the "same sides of a different coin" so they butt heads constantly. However, as their journey leads them from the cosmopolitan bustle of Bangkok to the picturesque limestones surrounded coffee plantations of Krabi, both Brian and Ticha begin to realize they were made for each other.

"Filmmaker 2.0: The Digital Auteurpreneur"

The modern, 21st century filmmaker must be both an auteur and an entrepreneur – hence the rise of the "auteurpreneur," a term coined to describe the emerging role that a filmmaker must play. Digital distribution and other dynamic technologies provide filmmakers with an array of powerful tools to use to promote and market their artistic vision.

The technology forum is a day-long series of workshops focused on the emerging marketing and distribution trends in digital and web-based technologies. Each workshop will explore a distinct topic and will be lead by a panel of professionals with expertise related to that topic. Participants will have an opportunity to interact with the workshop leaders and to ask them questions on the subject matter.

Prince of Broadway

Directed by Sean Baker

(2008, 99 min. U S A)

Prince of Broadway is the story of Lucky and Levon, two men whose lives converge in the underbelly of New York's wholesale fashion district. Lucky, an illegal immigrant from Ghana, makes ends meet by soliciting shoppers on the street with knock-off brand merchandise. Levon, an Armenian-Lebanese immigrant, operates an illegal storefront with a concealed back room where counterfeit goods are showcased to interested shoppers. Lucky's world is suddenly turned upside down when a child is thrust into his life by a woman who insists the toddler is his son. While Lucky copes with his new domestic dilemma, Levon struggles to save a marriage that is falling apart. The seedy side of the wholesale district is revealed through a journey that continually confronts the interplay between what is fake and what is real.

RHODE ISLAND INTERNATIONAL FILM FESTIVAL

AUGUST 3-9, 2009

Set in the shadow of the Flatiron building and soaked in the colorful bustle of Broadway, the film is as much a brutal drama as it is a tender comedy. Shot in a fast-paced guerilla style that is akin to the hustler lifestyle, the film reveals the lives of immigrants in America seeking ideals of family and love, while creating their own knock-off of the American Dream.

PROMENY

Directed by: Tomas Rehorek
(2008, 77 min. Italy / Czech Republic)

Promeny follows four stories of ordinary people. Their stories are simple and unexceptional at the first glance, yet the situations, viewed from the characters perspectives, are life-defining and nothing short of existential. Jana and Martin are a perfect young couple who have everything one could wish for except for a child due to his low sperm count. Lida is a struggling young single mother trying to get by while fending off the advances of oversexed men offering to pay her for favors. The Coach is a middle-aged man who has focused on his career, avoiding love and family and begins to regret the decision as he gets older. Lastly there is the old lady living alone in her large empty farmhouse with little contact to the outside world who seems to be simply waiting for the end of her life. The intertwining storylines focus on what happens for a person to finally grasp the rules of their life, as shaped by their fate. Can one choose to resist and go ones own way or is their life set by forces outside of their control?

The Satyr of Springbok Heights

Directed by Robert Silke

(2009, 54 min. South Africa)

Meet the inmates of an architecture that captivates. The location: Cape Town, South Africa. Springbok Heights is a tightly-wound knot of studio apartments... an art-deco masterpiece that weaves its residents into its mortar.

Wouter Malan: Co-op Chairman, musical tendencies, greasy facial hair. Wouter retired early from his career in physical education.

Hilda Steyn: Six-foot-three, impressively large hands. Hilda's had a crush on Wouter for forty years, but since undergoing elective surgery in the 1970s, Hilda lacks the one thing Wouter seeks most in a companion.

An affluent simpleton, two poor lesbians and a not-unattractive specimen of vermin swell the socially-claustrophobic ranks of this tiny universe, which Springbok Heights strains to contain.

Expert interviews reveal the terrifyingly-beautiful qualities of a building that holds its inmates in its thrall.

No.4 Street of Our Lady

Directed by Barbara Bird, Judy Maltz, Richie Sherman
(2009, 90 min. U S A / Israel, U S A, Ukraine)

No. 4 Street of our Lady tells the remarkable, yet little-known, story of a Polish-Catholic woman who rescued 16 Jews during the Holocaust by cleverly passing herself off as a Nazi sympathizer. This film reflects on the painful moral dilemmas that acts of rescue and survival often entail and reveals how traumatic events of the past continue to play out years later. On the eve of World War II, more than 6,000 Jews lived in Sokal, a small town in Eastern Poland, now part of Ukraine. By the end of the war, only about 30 had survived, most of them rescued by Francisca Halamajowa. For close to two years, Halamajowa hid her Jewish acquaintances in her tiny home and cooked and cared for them, right under the noses of German troops camping on her property and hostile neighbors. Two families were hidden in the hayloft of her pigsty, and one family in a hole dug under her kitchen floor. In the final months of the war, she also provided shelter to a German soldier who had defected – an act that almost cost her her life. The film draws on excerpts from a diary kept by one of the survivors, Moshe Maltz, whose granddaughter is one of the filmmakers. It also incorporates testimonies from other Jews saved by Halamajowa, her descendants and former neighbors, whose paths converge on a trip back to Sokal. Powerful location shots add another rich dimension to the story, providing the backdrop as the drama unfolds.

Jim Thorpe, The World's Greatest Athlete

Directed by Tom Weidlinger
(2009, 86 min. U S A)

Jim Thorpe, The World's Greatest Athlete is a biography of the Native American athlete who became a sports icon in the first half of the 20th century. Beginning with Thorpe's boyhood in Indian territory it chronicles his rise to athletic stardom at the Carlisle Indian Industrial School, winning two gold medals at the 1912 Summer Olympics, his fall from grace in the eyes of the amateur athletic establishment, and his rebound in professional baseball and football. Thorpe retired from pro sports at age 41 just before the stock market crash of '29. He worked as a construction laborer before getting work in Hollywood as a bit part player. He became a representative for Indian extras in Hollywood, fighting for equal pay for Native Americans in the movies. In the 1940s he crisscrossed the nation as a public speaker advocating for Indian self-determination.

Jim Thorpe, The World's Greatest Athlete is the first feature length documentary to be made about the man. It appeals to sports buffs as well as those interested in Native American issues, especially the tension between assimilation into white society and forging a separate Indian identity in the 20th century.

Nightmares in Red, White and Blue

Directed by Andrew Monument
(2008, 98 min. U S A)

'Nightmares in Red, White and Blue: The Evolution of the American Horror Film' is a feature length documentary based on the book of the same name by Joe Maddrey. It examines the idea that horror films reflect the times and places in which they are made - illustrating how classic monster movies exploited the anxieties of war-time generations, and how more savage modern horror films stem from the psychic fallout of America's counterculture movement and the subsequent rise of increasingly conservative political forces. From the silent films of Lon Chaney to the box office reign of Hannibal Lector and his peers, the history of the horror film is a story of the individual at odds with any organization that threatens his life, liberty and pursuit of happiness. 'Nightmares in Red, White and Blue' is narrated by horror genre icon Lance Henriksen, and features exclusive interviews with legendary auteurs like John Carpenter, George A. Romero, Joe Dante, Larry Cohen and Roger Corman, as well as film historian John Kenneth Muir and 'Fangoria' Editor Tony Timpone. Their observations are illustrated with clips from more than 100 films - ranging from the classic Universal monster movies to the psychological horrors of film noir, from groundbreaking films like 'Night of the Living Dead', 'Rosemary's Baby', 'The Exorcist' and 'Jaws' to contemporary slasher movies, Torture Porn and beyond.

Time's Arrow

Directed by Tom Strauss

(2009, 16 min. U S A)

"Time's Arrow" aims to formally articulate this ideology of the National Socialist movement under Adolf Hitler, particularly concerning medical practice, by following the life of a doctor in reverse. The protagonist, Todd Friendly, is a local practitioner in a small suburb of New England in the 1980s. He functions to injure the patients that step into his exam room. As time gradually dwindles down and Todd immigrates to Europe in 1946, he finds himself with the same occupation, but of a different nature. As a Nazi doctor, he in fact, brings the dead to life and heals their lacerations like magic. The Nazi doctors were the very arbiters of life and death in Auschwitz.

Directed by David Bettencourt

(2008, 60 min. U S A)

RHODE ISLAND INTERNATIONAL FILM FESTIVAL

AUGUST 3-9, 2009

ON THE LAKE: Life and Love in a Distant Place tells the true story of the tuberculosis epidemic in America in the 1900s and globally today through the lives of those that were infected and who died — but also of those who survived. More than scientific facts and figures, ON THE LAKE touches that rare emotional cord of what life was like for millions of people infected with TB, while providing a glimpse into human nature when faced with a large-scale epidemic.

Through powerful storytelling, ON THE LAKE shines new light on a major period in our collective history that has been forgotten — and a disease that many today think is “dead,” but is in fact the number-two infectious killer globally (after HIV/AIDS).

WILLIAM SHATNER UNPLUGGED

You know the name. You've seen his work. But what do you really know about William Shatner? Join us for an unfiltered, unvarnished and candid conversation with this very popular cultural legend.

Plus a special screening of his critically acclaimed film:

William Shatner's Gonzo Ballet

Directed by Kevin Layne

(2008, 51 min. U S A)

On a cold, Milwaukee night, high art meets pop culture as the music of William Shatner ('Star Trek,' 'Boston Legal') and Ben Folds (Ben Folds Five), from their critically acclaimed album, 'Has Been,' is transformed into 'Common People,' a ballet from award winning choreographer Margo Sappington ('Oh! Calucetta!).

'Gonzo Ballet' explores this unique collaboration, as well as the musical journey that has taken William Shatner from the trippy covers of 'Lucy in the Sky with Diamonds' and 'Mr. Tambourine Man' in the 1960's to his recent original work with Ben Folds, and finally, to the ballet.

The willingness of the audience to accept new work, especially work based upon a pop album, is explored, as is the popularity of ballet in our culture. 'Gonzo Ballet' takes us from Shatner's musical beginnings, and the critical misfires, to his finally 'getting it right' with Ben Folds, and to the unlikely collaboration with Margo Sappington. What shines through is each artist's dedication to their work, and to each other.

with the arrangement or her contempt for the man who 'doesn't even speak English. Alone in her parent's bedroom, Emily takes comfort among the smell and feel of her mother's belongings when Alberto interrupts her reverie. Grappling with the language barrier between them, Emily agrees to accompany her grandfather on a journey into their Los Angeles neighborhood that proves both disappointing and delightful. In an unexpected diversion on the way home Emily witnesses the foreign world of cigars, civility, conversation, Tango music and dance. Later on that night in the warm glow of the kitchen, Alberto understands what Emily cannot express in words and Alberto offers his granddaughter her first tango lesson on the kitchen linoleum. Emily and Alberto dance a simple tango and discover a language they can share.

Art & Copy

Directed by Doug Pray

(2008, 86 min. French Guiana, U S A)

ART & COPY is about advertising and creativity, and its profound effects on modern culture. Like Dorothy pulling the curtain back on the Wizard of Oz himself, the film intimately reveals the relatively unknown personalities and stories of the most influential advertising creatives of our age: Lee Clow, George Lois, Mary Wells Lawrence, Hal Riney, Dan Wieden and David Kennedy, Phyllis K. Robinson, Jeff Goodby and Rich Silverstein, plus others, who have shaped our daily lives with their ideas for selling us cars, clothes, computers and presidential campaigns. Directed by Doug Pray ("Surfwise," "Scratch") the film interweaves stunning cinematography of TV satellites being launched and billboards being erected with some of the greatest ad campaigns of all time, resulting in an inspiring synthesis of art, commerce and human emotion.

The story revolves around that timeless and controversial concept of power. The story is a powerful and graphic representation of power and its ability to corrupt.

The movie set in a remote and parched village in India sometime in the future serves as a fitting metaphor to the current reality of this world. That reality is one which tells us that power rests with those who control the resources and that power becomes the basis of how they interact with the greater world!

Operation Babylift: The Lost Children of Vietnam

Directed by: Tammy Nguyen Lee

(2009, 73 min. U S A, Viet Nam)

In April of 1975, America closed a chapter in one of its darkest moments in history – The Vietnam War. Through the ashes of that time rises a story that reflects heroism of ordinary people who united against great odds to achieve a common good for the innocent. Operation Babylift was a $2 million dollar initiative airlifted over 2,500 Vietnamese orphans out of a war-torn country to save them from the

Brave Father

Directed by Li Junhu

(2008, 50 min. China)

In 2002, Han Peiyin's son Shengli was accepted in a university, and arrived to the city of Xi'an from his rural home. To pay for Shengli's living expense and tuition, the Han sold off all valuable things in his home and came to work in Xi'an to make money. Though a lifetime peasant, Han firmly believed knowledge had the power to change destinies, and expected his son to be successful.

Job for peasant workers was getting harder to find as more and more peasants came to the city. Han could barely make RMB 400 a month, yet Shengli needed RMB 9,000 a year for college. The place Han stayed at cost one RMB a night. At night, he used a brick as his pillow. His son Shengli had to ponder about what to eat right after class. He saw the bottled water his classmate was holding and could only think of taking the empty bottle and selling it for money.

Graduation was near. As a shy young man, Shengli's job prospect was dim. He felt this city was becoming further away from him. Despite his education, he might end up earning less than his father. For years elder Han carried with him a notebook, in which he entered records of his borrowings. Most of them were small sums of 10 or 20 RMB. He also noted his expectations for his son: "Around the year 2013 or so, that is, roughly in my sixties, Shengli will take our family to Beijing for a sightseeing visit. We will have plenty of money by then..."

RHODE ISLAND INTERNATIONAL FILM FESTIVAL

AUGUST 3-9, 2009

Directed by Anna von Lowzow
(2008, 61 min. Denmark)

P.S. Krøyer is the undisputed centre of the Skagen painters. He is famous and married to the most beautiful woman. He is ignorant of the fact, that he has inherited his mother's mental illness. This documentary is a tribute to an artistic prodigy, who brought Danish art to an international level.

In Skagen an artist's colony is created. "Hip Hip Hurra" becomes the symbol of the two decades of happiness and unity, where P.S. Krøyer is the central figure in the breakthrough for a new style of painting at the end of the 1800's.

But when his smouldering insanity starts to manifest itself, the famous painter faces desperate times. His wife leaves him, and with her the whole foundation of his idyllic existence disappears.

Cast: Barry Pepper, Cole Hauser, Kate Levering, Kirk B.R. Woller, L. Scott Caldwell, Maxwell Perry Cotton, Mira Sorvino

Karen Kingsbury's 'Like Dandelion Dust', based on the best-selling novel, is a compelling drama that explores the different meanings of being a parent through the grittily realistic lives of the struggling, blue-collar Porter's, and the privileged Campbell family. Their lives intersect, intertwine and collide, all for the love of a little boy. This film is wonderfully acted, bravely exposing the humanity in each character and reminding us that we each have the potential to be the best and worst versions of ourselves at any time.

Cast: Allan Hawco and Sarah Greene

Love and Savagery is a story of passion, fate, and the consequences of the two.

In 1968, Newfoundland poet Michael McCarthy travels to Ballyvaughan in Ireland to study the visually stunning landscape of the Burren. There he meets Cathleen, a beautiful woman who captures his heart, but because of the path she has chosen cannot allow him to capture hers.

Savagery erupts when Michael's persistence collides with the townspeople's hostility toward a foreigner's attempt to intervene with divinity. Cathleen has to choose between a desire that she has recently discovered and a desire that she has felt throughout most of her life.

Will she choose the love of a man, or the love of God? Can she love both? Is she strong enough to make the right choice

Nightmares in Red, White and Blue

Directed by Andrew Monument

(2008, 98 min. U S A)

'Nightmares in Red, White and Blue: The Evolution of the American Horror Film' is a feature length documentary based on the book of the same name by Joe Maddrey. It examines the idea that horror films reflect the times and places in which they are made - illustrating how classic monster movies exploited the anxieties of war-time generations, and how more savage modern horror films stem from the psychic fallout of America's counterculture movement and the subsequent rise of increasingly conservative political forces. From the silent films of Lon Chaney to the box office reign of Hannibal Lector and his peers, the history of the horror film is a story of the individual at odds with any organization that threatens his life, liberty and pursuit of happiness. 'Nightmares in Red, White and Blue' is narrated by horror genre icon Lance Henriksen, and features exclusive interviews with legendary auteurs like John Carpenter, George A. Romero, Joe Dante, Larry Cohen and Roger Corman, as well as film historian John Kenneth Muir and 'Fangoria' Editor Tony Timpone. Their observations are illustrated with clips from more than 100 films - ranging from the classic Universal monster movies to the psychological horrors of film noir, from groundbreaking films like 'Night of the Living Dead', 'Rosemary's Baby', 'The Exorcist' and 'Jaws' to contemporary slasher movies, Torture Porn and beyond.

good-looking, conservative, and never thought the unthinkable would happen to him. Emily is quirky and predictably liberal, consciously making herself stand out as unique. She is sweet, good-natured, and blatantly honest. While meeting for the first time, their conversation covers a variety of bases, until the white elephant in the room, their disease, is finally addressed. It turns out they both just want someone to talk to, to understand, to listen.

PLAYGROUND

Directed by Libby Spears
(2008, 86 min. U S A)

At the heart of the story is Michelle, whose first encounter with sexual abuse began at five. Having run away from a foster care system that left Michelle vulnerable and at risk, the film opens with the filmmaker's search for her. Over a five year period, Spears unravels the gut-wrenching atrocities suffered by Michelle and other children like her, who are victims of the American sex trafficking industry. Spears constructs an insightful and nuanced narrative that details just how complex and massive this problem is.

Playground examines our legal and social systems, and their ineffectiveness at dealing with this problem. Neither dogmatic nor sensationalist, Playground offers no clear-cut answers, but compels us to begin asking questions... the right questions: Why do we treat children as victims in cases of sexual abuse, but as soon as money is exchanged, these sexually abused children are deemed criminals?

RHODE ISLAND INTERNATIONAL FILM FESTIVAL

AUGUST 3-9, 2009

Playground employs a hand-crafted animation style that harkens back to the early days of animation as an art form. With original illustrations created by Yoshitomo Nara, the animation in Playground is used as an emotional relief of the heavy subject matter. The animation suggest, rather than literally depict, some of the horrors of sex trafficking, and does an effective job at conveying the psychological and emotional climate suffered by the victims.

From filmmaker Libby Spears and Producers George Clooney, Grant Heslov, and Steven Soderbergh, comes a beautifully-wrought, astonishing portrait of our country's most alarming and insidious secret -- the child sex trafficking in America.

Sweet Crude

Directed by Sandy Cioffi

(2008, 90 min. Nigeria/U S A)

In a small corner of Nigeria, billions of dollars of crude oil flow under the feet of a desperate people. Immense wealth and abject poverty stand in stark contrast. The environment is decimated. The people have had enough. After decades of nonviolent protest, in 2005 a new militancy was born. The Niger Delta is seething.

Sweet Crude is a documentary about the Niger Delta. It tells the story of the humanitarian, environmental and economic devastation there in the wake of 50 years of oil extraction; the Movement for the Emancipation of the Niger Delta (MEND); and the opportunity for the international community to do something about the crisis before it's too late. It also raises broader issues of oil politics, mass media agendas and the role of independent journalists in getting the truth out.

Who Killed Chea Vichea?

Directed by Bradley Cox
(2009, 54 min. Thailand/U S A)

'Who Killed Chea Vichea?' unravels the mystery surrounding the assassination of a popular labor leader in Cambodia's growing garment industry. Two men are arrested and convicted, but are they guilty? And if not, who is? The implications reach far beyond the police station and the courtroom: to the headquarters of the ruling party and to the garment trade that is Cambodia's economic lifeblood.

Director Bradley Cox shot events as they happened and tracked down witnesses in a country where knowing too much can cost you your life. On-the-spot footage, hidden-camera work and hard-core investigation tells the story of a killing that put a nation into mourning and cemented a regime's hold on power.

Who Killed Chea Vichea? is highly charged murder mystery that takes place at the deadly intersection of unchecked power and unbelievable bravery. It's a documentary like no other.

Unconquered; Allan Houser and the Legacy of One Apache Family

Directed by: Bryan Beasley
(2009, 32 min. U S A)

Spanning from the 1860's through today, the Houser / Haozous story is a journey exploring the incarceration of a people, growth brought on by freedom, and a family's personal expression of these experiences through art. Recently released as Prisoners of War, Sam and Blossom Haozous' passed down oral traditions of the Apache people to their son Allan Houser. These shared memories molded his artwork, and in turn helped him become one of the 20th Century's most important artists. Allan then passed these same family experiences down to his own sons who are fulfilling their destinies as the next generation of Native American artists. In the end, the American Dream is alive in the strength of this one Apache family's legacy. Narrated by Val Kilmer.

Up from the Bottoms: The Search for the American Dream

Directed by Jim Schaub
(2009, 58 min. U S A)

The documentary "Up From the Bottoms: The Search for the American Dream" tells the story of the massive migration of African Americans from the rural south to the prosperous north during the war years and beyond. The voice of Cicely Tyson guides us through these touching, thoughtful and often funny stories as told by fifteen residents of Muskegon, Michigan. Civil rights activist, comedian and author Dick Gregory gives a national perspective along with the renowned scholar of Black Americana studies, Dr. Ben Wilson. During the late 1930's through the 1960's, factory jobs in the north were abundant while farming jobs in the southern states were disappearing. In the 1940's alone, a million and a half African Americans left

“Wellness” - 90 min

(2007, 90 min. U S A)

In the docu-realist American tragedy Wellness, Willy Lomanesque salesman Thomas Lindsey gives everything he's got—including his heart, soul, and money—to a financial scam that ends up bankrupting him and destroying his life. Falling under the spell of Paul Stubbs (played by the filmmaker's own father), the charismatic bully behind the fake Wellness Corporation, Lindsey is lured in by a pyramid scheme that promises material, spiritual, and physical well-being in the form of a capsule. Despite his awkward persona and utter lack of experience, Lindsey (Jeff Clark, a psych-ward therapist by day) believes that he too can succeed at the miracle-cure business by spreading the word to other investors. Traveling to a small Pennsylvania town, he struggles to organize a sales presentation, awaiting the arrival of promotional materials that never materialize. Perversely, as the situation worsens, Lindsey's resolve increases, until he finally steels himself for a leap of faith that can only mean disaster. In the end, he must choose between betraying other unwitting hopefuls or confronting the devastating loss of his life savings.

I HAVE IT

Directed by Sam Griffith

(2009, 21 min. U S A)

"I HAVE IT" follows Emily and George (Larisa Oleynik and Devon Gummersall, respectively), a couple meeting for the first time after finding each other on an online dating site for individuals with HIV. George is an upper class mid-late twenties man, who has always embraced his privileged upbringing. He is likeable, good-looking, conservative, and never thought the unthinkable would happen to him. Emily is quirky and predictably liberal, consciously making herself stand out as unique. She is sweet, good-natured, and blatantly honest. While meeting for the first time, their conversation covers a variety of bases, until the white elephant in the room, their disease, is finally addressed. It turns out they both just want someone to talk to, to understand, to listen.

War Against The Weak

Directed by Justin Strawhand

(2008, 92 min. Germany, Poland, U S A)

Based on the book by New York Times best selling author and nine time Pulitzer Prize nominee, Edwin Black, War Against the Weak is the untold story of American Eugenics, a movement that attempted to breed a Nordic master race through the elimination of the "unfit".

In the first three decades of the 20th Century, American corporate philanthropy, combined with the efforts of the scientific, academic and political elite, created the pseudoscience eugenics, and institutionalized race politics as national policy. The goal was to create a superior, white, Nordic race and obliterate the virtually everyone else.

Under the Nazis, American eugenic principles were applied without restraint, careening out of control into the Reich's infamous genocide. American eugenicists openly supported Germany's program, with both financial and intellectual capital. Once WWII began, Nazi eugenics turned from mass sterilization and euthanasia to genocidal murder.

War Against the Weak explores this complex relationship between American eugenics and the horrors of the Holocaust.

In 2006, Democrats face a moment of truth. Republicans control all three branches of government and possess more concentrated power than in nearly a century. The daily reality of war, fear, and economic unrest is taking its toll on the American psyche.

RHODE ISLAND INTERNATIONAL FILM FESTIVAL

AUGUST 3-9, 2009

Facing the prospect of becoming a permanent minority party, Democrats formulate an unprecedented, high-risk strategy to gain control of the House of Representatives in hopes of restoring the balance of power and enacting a progressive agenda. At the helm of their relentless effort is the colorful, iconoclastic congressman Rahm Emanuel. Republicans prepare to play defense.

As the race unfolds, HOUSEQUAKE gets inside seven key contests across the country and follows national players on both sides of the aisle. It captures the emotional drama, high stakes, intense competition, and historical implications of the race with an intimate view of the American political process that is rarely revealed in the media.

The Democrats' takeover of Congress was more than just a good year. This historic campaign for change paved the way for Barack Obama's presidential victory and transformed forever the way political races are run in America. HOUSEQUAKE shows how.

The Day After Peace

Directed by Jeremy Gilley

(2008, 81 min, United Kingdom / Afghanistan, Argentina, Congo, Costa Rica, Egypt, Ghana, India, Israel, Kenya, U S A, United Kingdom)

The Day After Peace charts the remarkable 10-year journey taken by award winning filmmaker Jeremy Gilley to establish a day of Peace on September 21st. During the course of his mission the camera follows Gilley as he galvanizes the countries of the world to recognize this as an official day of ceasefire and non-violence. After the official motion is unanimously adopted in the UN, Gilley turns his efforts to implementing the ideals of Peace Day around the world. Celebrity support from the likes of Angelina Jolie and Jonny Lee Miller and corporate support from Puma, Coca-Cola, Ben & Jerry's and Ecover enhances the momentum. Jeremy's persistence is rewarded when UNICEF, the World Health Organisation and local affected communities decide to try and use the Day to carry out a mass vaccination against Polio, in one of the toughest conflict areas in the world, Afghanistan. Jeremy asks Jude Law to accompany him to Afghanistan, to help persuade the government and insurgents to ratify Peace Day. The task seems impossible, but pure human spirit in a country exhausted with conflict, may just win through.

My Son the Pornographer

Directed by Peter Campbell

(2009, 45 min. Canada / Canada, Czech Republic)

The new documentary film MY SON THE PORGNOGRAPHER is a love story. Art, a Victoria, British Columbia, filmmaker, struggles with his conservative moral values when he visits his son Kole who works as a writer and actor in the pornography business in Prague. Appalled by the sexual abuse Kole experienced as a child, Art believes Kole's current lifestyle is directly linked to that sad event. Art wants to get Kole out of an existence that, in his eyes, is soul-destroying. Against the backdrop of the beautiful city of Prague, Art and Kole strive to reconcile their relationship and their perceptions of a difficult past. Thrown into the world of hard core pornography, Art finds a surprising humanity in the people he meets there even as he continues to urge Kole to leave it. Art also attempts to convince Kole to return to Canada and confront the past, a past that Art does not believe Kole can move beyond without facing it. In Ottawa, Art hires a private detective to track the abuser down and, as the detective unearths clues that bring them nearer to the pedophile, Art discovers how close to violence he himself can come. Set in Prague, Czech Republic; Victoria, British Columbia and Ottawa, MY SON THE PORNOGRAPHER follows the journey of two men as they reflect on the stresses and strains that tear families apart, on moral values, guilt and life choices. Ultimately, it is a story about the love between a father and a son.

Shooting Beauty

Directed by George Kachadorian
(2008, 62 min. U S A)

Winner of back to back Audience Awards at both competitive festivals the film has screened at so far, SHOOTING BEAUTY tells the story of an aspiring fashion photographer named Courtney Bent whose career takes a life changing turn when she discovers a hidden world of beauty at a center for people living with significant cerebral palsy and other disabilities.

Shot over the span of a decade, this film puts you in Courtney's shoes as she overcomes her own reservations and begins inventing cameras accessible to her new friends, exposing a story far wilder than she would have even imagined. Ernest 'EJ' James learns to take pictures with his tongue while dodging Boston traffic. Cheryl Magnusson-- who previously communicated only by pointing to words printed on her wheelchair tray-- discovers a new way to express herself as she desperately searches for companionship. Mary Jo Chaisson may be the most infectious, joyful character ever captured on film. And Tony Knight, a handsome, well spoken Jamaican native who was born with his umbilical cord wrapped around his neck, uses his photography to 'start the conversation' with a public afraid to approach him. Tom Herrick is perhaps most changed by the experience as he battles medical complications resulting from his cleft spine. Courtney's efforts snowball into an award winning photography program called "Picture This"—and become the backdrop for this eye opening story about romance, daring, loss and laughter that will change what you thought you knew about living with a disability—and without one.

Laughology

Directed by Albert Nerenberg

(2009, 65 min. Canada, India, Tanzania, U S A, United Kingdom)

Laughter. Plato hated it, the Bible discouraged it, scientists avoided it, psychologists once thought if it didn't kill you, it would drive you insane. With his trademark blend of humour and serious investigation, Albert Nerenberg drops in on cutting edge neuroscientists and cardiologists to Christian holy laughter groups in search of its origin and meaning. Ultimately he finds the man with the most contagious laugh in the world. Laughology wittily weaves research, archival stills, television clips, and a hilarious send-up of the use of re-enactments in docs. Nerenberg's quest to rediscover his own laugh has produced a film that will undoubtedly play a major role in a 'global laughter trend at a crucial time when the world needs a good laugh.'

IT'S ALL IN THE MIND OF THE BEHOLDER: short films

THE 8TH SAMURAI

Directed by: Justin Ambrosino

(2008, 29 min. U S A)

"It cannot be eight; it has to be Seven Samurai!" It's 1953 and beyond the Tokyo Metropolis, deep in the mountains of Gotemba, a jidei-geki (period drama) samurai movie is about to begin production. By a little persistence and a stroke of good luck a small time actor, Nanshu, gets the chance of a lifetime: a lead role as one of the eight samurai that will save a village from bandits. After months of training, Nanshu is betting it all that this role will make him the greatest actor in the History of Japan. But little does he know that the Director is having doubts about his choice. And there is only one thing Nanshu didn't prepare for: being fired. THE 8TH SAMURAI is a tragic comedy about fate from writer/director Justin Ambrosino that pays homage to the samurai films, Italian Neorealism and the American comedies of the 1950s.

Boy in the World

Directed by: Jessica Jennings

(2007, 44 min. U S A)

For many three and four-year-olds, learning how to live in the world begins in a preschool classroom. Children with developmental disabilities are no exception. Following four-year-old Ronen, a young boy with Down syndrome, this intimate documentary concretely demonstrates that inclusive preschool classrooms benefit both children with special needs and their typical peers. It examines the nuts and bolts of successful inclusion as well as the challenges of educational practices that help all children to learn and to find their place in the world.

of the New York Knicks, in 1947. Overcoming the national political climate during World War II, Wat was a star player for the University of Utah 1944 and 1947 championship teams, taking 2 years off in between to serve in the U.S. Army. His perseverance and loyalty to his teammates, other Nissei friends (including those interned at Topaz) and his family, are a testament to the unflappable Japanese American spirit. This film includes in depth interviews with Wat and his family, teammates from his championship teams (including Arnie Ferrin, Herb Wilkinson, Fred Lewis and Glynn Peterson), sports authorities, and many who continue to look up to him as both a role model and personal hero. The film also has video clips from his 1944 and 1947 college games, rare footage from a visit to the Topaz Internment Camp, and countless photos of his triumphant career. Co-directed by award-winning filmmakers Bruce Johnson and Christine Toy Johnson, this project was awarded two consecutive grants from the California Civil Liberties Public Education Program.

Rock Prophecies

Directed by John Chester
(2009, 80 min. U S A, United Kingdom)

Imagine seeing bands like Led Zeppelin or the Rolling Stones long before they became famous. Legendary Rock photographer Robert Knight did just that, and has the photos to prove it. ROCK PROPHECIES explores Robert's amazing career and follows him on his quest to help the bands of today become the Rock legends of tomorrow, whether promoting Panic at the Disco before anybody has heard of them, or convincing Aussie band Sick Puppies to sell everything and move to the United States. When Robert stumbles upon Tyler Dow Bryant – a 16-year old guitar phenom from Texas – he's convinced he may have found the next Stevie Ray Vaughan. Robert risks his reputation and career and takes a chance on Tyler. The two then set off on an unbelievable journey to take their own shot at making history.

Smile 'Til It Hurts: The Up With People Story

Directed by Lee Storey

(2008, 81 min. U S A)

SMILE 'TIL IT HURTS: THE UP WITH PEOPLE STORY explores the clean-cut, smiledrenched singing phenomenon Up With People. The group was born in response to the counter-culture of the '60's, spun from the controversial maneuverings of a religious sect called Moral Re-Armament, backed by millions of corporate dollars, and launched around the globe to exemplify conservative American values.

Embraced by Presidents Nixon, Reagan, and George H.W. Bush; by corporations like Exxon, GM, Coors, Coca Cola, Halliburton and Searle; and by global leaders such as Queen Noor of Jordan, King Juan Carlos of Spain, and Pope John Paul II, Up With People was determined to change the world one squeaky clean song at a time -- but its impossibly cheery facade concealed a much more complicated reality for its members.

Told by former Uppies whose compelling stories take us on an intimate journey, the film reveals what happens when ideology, money, and groupthink converge to co-opt youthful idealism. A cautionary tale spanning decades, SMILE 'TIL IT HURTS: THE UP WITH PEOPLE STORY i

Thirty-something ALPER is a talented chef who runs his own restaurant. He may have achieved success in business, but the same cannot be said of his personal life. While caught in the triangle of his gastronomic creations, one-night stands and escort girls, he suddenly finds his life take a new turn when he walks into a second-hand bookshop in the backstreets of Beyoglu to buy an old record he has been looking for.

ADA is an attractive, unassuming and relatively stable woman in her late 20s who designs and makes fancy dress costumes for kids. One day, while wandering around Beyoglu in search of a second-hand book, she walks into the same shop as Alper. A womaniser by nature, Alper is impressed by Ada's good looks and sets off in pursuit. As a pretext for introducing himself, he tracks down the book Ada was looking for, buys it and then presents it to her.

As it turns out, this book is the beginning of a passionate affair between the two. But the harder Alper tries to create space for Ada in his existing life, the more restricted, the more claustrophobic he starts to feel. Ada, however, is blissfully unaware of the poison in Alper's blood and delights on being in love.

Ada and Alper live out their romance as far as they are able and in the measure to which life allows them.

Rocaterrania

Directed by Brett Ingram

RHODE ISLAND INTERNATIONAL FILM FESTIVAL

AUGUST 3-9, 2009

(2008, 73 min. U S A)

Renaldo Kuhler is the only son of Otto Kuhler, a German immigrant who served under Kaiser Wilhelm in World War I before emigrating to America with seven dollars in his pocket. Renaldo grew up in the immense shadow of his father (who became a famous American industrial designer and acclaimed landscape painter) and struggled to find his own identity as an artist.

Like many Germans, Otto Kuhler romanticized the American West and the freedom it symbolized. When Otto fulfilled a lifelong dream by moving his family from upstate New York to a remote Colorado cattle ranch in 1948, teenaged Renaldo found the isolation unbearable and escaped to the private fantasy world of his notebooks. What began as the illustrated history of an imaginary country called "Rocaterrania" became Renaldo's lifelong obsession – secretly documenting the satirically coded story of his own life.

Rocaterrania is a tiny nation of eastern European immigrants who purchased a tract of land along the Canadian border - just north of the Adirondack Mountains in New York - after growing restless with America's notions of "democracy." Over the next six decades, Rocaterrania saw two revolutions and the rise and fall of a succession of czars, dictators, and presidents among a cast of characters vaguely resembling Russian historical figures. But, as the film reveals, each change in government reflects a deeper meaning for Renaldo, an outsider who struggled to escape an emotionally abusive family and searched for freedom within a real nation threatened by forces of conformity.

(2009, 82 min. New Zealand)

Many of us assume that there are only two genders and that being female or male follows from the sex of our biological bodies. Focusing on the art, photography and performances of four 'alternative' gender artists of Maori, Samoan-Japanese, and Pakeha descent, Assume Nothing poses the questions: 'What if 'male' and 'female' are not the only options? How do other genders express themselves through art?' Candid, playful and provocative, Assume Nothing travels from Wellington's Red Rocks to the Metropolitan Museum of Art in New York to explore the potent creative world that flourishes between and beyond genders.

HOME IS WHERE YOU FIND IT

Directed by Alcides Soares
(2009, 34 min. U S A)

Alcides Soares is a sixteen-year-old AIDS orphan, one of half a million living in Mozambique today. An American television writer (Neal Baer) and movie director (Chris Zalla) gave Alcides a movie camera and taught him how to shoot. The result is a moving chronicle directed by Alcides himself. His journey to find a family and make a new life in a country that has been ravaged by AIDS, is a story repeated millions of times everyday throughout Africa. As Alcides's story unfolds, we meet the orphans of Reencontro, an organization in Moputo that provides these children with bare sustenance. The Reencontro orphans were also taught photography by a group of American and Mozambiquan photographers and provided with still cameras so they could tell their own stories about the impact of AIDS on their lives. Their pictures, sometimes tragic, often hopeful and always honest, appear throughout 'The House Is Small but the Welcome Is Big' as a reminder that these children's voices must be heard. In telling his story, Alcides finds an elderly woman to live with and, unexpectedly, is reunited with his younger brother whom he hasn't seen in ten years. AIDS tears families apart, but the resilience of children like Alcides can make new families out of tragedy.

(2009, 19 min. Australia)

Kath has been looking for love in all the wrong places. Then, she finds herself in Chinatown. In the middle of a less than successful blind date, she overhears the soulful Cantonese singing of kitchen-hand, Ah Gong. Kath is intrigued. But is there more to Ah Gong than meets the eye? "Celestial Avenue" is an offbeat tale - part karaoke video, part cross-cultural comedy - about love, music and personal reinvention.

The Enchanted Island

RHODE ISLAND INTERNATIONAL FILM FESTIVAL

AUGUST 3-9, 2009

Directed by Noel Kearns

(2009, 20 min. Ireland)

Off the south-west coast of Ireland lies a small sheltered island with a mysterious ancient garden on it. People say it is a magical place and stories of mermaids living in the surrounding waters have often been told. No one lives on the island except for a solitary gardener Brian. And every night he is left alone on this small enchanted island. Or is he?

An Unfinished Romance

Directed by Alison Heather

(2009, 10 min. Australia)

A gentle romantic comedy looking at the assumptions we make about other people, which make or break our sense of enchantment, the essence of romance.

"War" - 84 min

(2004, 70 min. U S A)

NEAR THE BEGINNING OF JAKE MAHAFFY'S B&W POSTAPOCALYPSE EPIC WAR, AN OFFSCREEN VOICE MURMURS, "This is the world after the end of the world." The quote refers to the film's camera trail of poverty and economic devastation, images suggesting a ruined American heartland as shot by Andrei Tarkovsky or Walker Evans. But the quote could just easily apply to Mahaffy's own brand of independent filmmaking. Over the course of five years, Mahaffy shot War with a hand-cranked silent camera and without a crew. "I started off with a script and a very clear idea of what I wanted to do," he explains. "But I didn't have the money to shoot dialogue. So rather than stop I decided to shoot everything except the script. I shot hours and hours of the lives of the characters not in the script. I would just roll film and hope that it would come together in the end."

RHODE ISLAND INTERNATIONAL FILM FESTIVAL

AUGUST 3-9, 2009

The result is a strange, ghostly depiction of lonely characters adrift in a rural wasteland set to a soundtrack of radio broadcasts and pensive narration. War played the Sundance Frontier section in 2004, and since then Mahaffy has continued to mine his singular style, returning to the festival this year with a short, Motion Studies #3: Gravity, part of a series of films "mocking the religion of science by artistically reinterpreting various scientific data."

Nuestros Desaparecidos / Our Disappeared

Directed by Juan Mandelbaum

(2008, 99m, Argentina, U S A)

"Our Disappeared"/"Nuestros Desaparecidos" is director Juan Mandelbaum's personal search for the souls of friends and loved ones who were caught in the vise of the military and "disappeared" in his native Argentina during the 1976-1983 military dictatorship.

After learning that Patricia, a long lost girlfriend, is among the "desaparecidos" Mandelbaum returns to Argentina to find out what happened to her and others he knew who mysteriously vanished. As he revisits the dreams they shared for a revolution that would transform Argentina he also grieves the tragic losses and examines his own choices.

Through dramatic stories told by parents, siblings, friends and children of the disappeared, Mandelbaum shows what happens when brutal regimes attack the fabric of a country with great impunity, causing enormous suffering that lasts for generations. Using extraordinary archival footage, Mandelbaum brings the energy and tension of the time and place to life.
